WILL ENDEAVOR TO REVIVE PROSPERITY IN THE COAL FIELDS

Operators, Miners and Public To Join in Co-operative Movement

MARKET HAS BEEN LOST

Keen Concern Is Felt Over The Status of The Industry

(Editor's Note: Driven to action by loss of markets by the anthracite industry which threatens the welfare of a million persons in the hard coal regions of Pennsylvania, the operators, the miners and the public have joined hands in a gigantic co-operative movement to regain prosperity.

The attention of the economic world is focused on the efforts of the industry to win back the favor of consumers and regain business lost to bituminous coal, oil and electricity.

In the following article, the first of a series prepared for The Courier by International News Service, the Pennsylvania Bureau of Mines reveals the decline of production in the anthracite region during the past decade.)

By William B. Brown
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 18.—While operators, miners and the public in the anthracite regions strive to rebuild the hard coal market and win back consumers who have been lost in recent years, Frank Hall, Deputy Secretary of the State Department of Mines yesterday revealed figures which showed declines of millions of tons in production during the past ten years.

Strikes and suspensions played havoc with production during the past decade, the figures revealed. During the strike of 1922 alone a decline of nearly forty million tons net in the annual production was registered, Hall said. The industry was staggered by this blow, but managed to regain its lost production the next year, only to decline five million tons net in 1924.

Production dropped sixteen million tons the following year, during the strike of 1925, and still badly crippled by suspension which lasted until February 18, 1926, nevertheless managed to partly regain normal production, registering nearly eighty-four million tons last year.

The department first compiled accurate figures on anthracite production, when the total number of tons mined was 14,172,004.

From that year until 1917, when America entered the World War, and a high peak of 100,445,299 tons was reached, production increased steadily each year. Natural growth of population coupled with a growing shortage of wood, officials said, was responsible for the steadily increasing demand.

In 1918, the second year of the war, production was 99,445,794 tons. Production during both 1925 and 1926 were affected by the strike, which began on Sept. 1, 1925, and ended Feb. 18, 1926. In 1925 production was 61,334,145 tons. Stocking by dealers after the strike sent production to 83,874,000 tons.

The last year in which production was not affected by the strikes was in 1924, when 87,277,449 tons were mined. Hall said that it was impossible to forecast accurately what production for the present year will be. During the summer months production figures were unusually low, even for that season of the year. A spurt during the remaining months of the year may send the totals up toward the 1926 figures, but Hall doubted that last year's total would be equalled.

Tomorrow, Matthew F. Boyd, widely known economist and authority on anthracite, will outline his reactions to conditions in the hard coal regions, as he has observed them during the past few months.

TWO WORKMEN DROP 35 FEET OFF SCAFFOLD

One of Pair is Badly Hurt at Grand Theatre Building On Mill Street

BOTH ARE IN HOSPITAL

Two men were injured, one seriously, this morning at the building operation of the Grand Theater, Mill street and Highway.

Injured:

James Hamilton and William Boyd. Both are residents of Philadelphia and have been engaged as plasterers at the theater building.

According to the information obtainable shortly after the accident the two were working on a scaffold inside the building at a height of about 35 feet. The scaffold gave way and the pair were thrown to the ground floor. Officer Phillips rushed the men to the Harriman Hospital in the police car.

At the hospital, this afternoon, it was stated that nothing definite regarding the condition of the injured, could be given at this time. It was stated, however, that Hamilton was the more seriously injured of the two. It will be necessary to take X-ray pictures before the seriousness of the injuries can be stated with any certainty.

Officer Hughes Warns Autoists Of Violations

It is the order of Officer H. Lincoln Hughes, of Bensalem Township, that spectators at fires do not block the highway as was the case at the fire in Croydon Sunday night.

Officer Hughes states that Cornwells Engine No. 2 was unable to get within 200 feet of the fire and Engine No. 1 did not get within 1000 feet of the blaze.

In trying to get the fire apparatus back to their respective fire houses, Officer Hughes was about 25 minutes getting traffic opened.

If this case arises against the drivers of all machines obstructing the highway on the wrong side of the road will be summoned before a Justice.

The fine for this offense is $25 and costs. It is the wish of Officer Hughes that all spectators who are so anxious to go and see these fires, do not do anything to obstruct the highway and keep the fire apparatus and firemen from reaching the point where the fire is, please take warning of the above.

CARD PARTY

A card party given for the benefit of the Torredale Branch of the Needlework Guild of America is to be held at the Morelton Inn, Torredale, Philadelphia, on Friday evening, October 21st, at eight o'clock. Tickets, $1.00. Buses will meet trolleys at Frankford and Grant avenues from 7:30 to 8:30 and will also make the return trip after the party. Tickets can be bought from Mrs. L. E. Machette, 520 Radcliffe street.

PLAN SUPPER

Thursday night the Mothers' Association of the Bristol public schools will give the annual supper in the high school, Wilson avenue and Garfield street. A tasty menu is being arranged for the occasion.

VISIT IN EASTON

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Machette and family spent Sunday in Easton, Pa.

Mr. Smoyer Should Speak Frankly

(EDITORIAL)

OCTOBER 14th was the final day on which candidates might withdraw their names from the November Election.

Five of our Wards have for years been overwhelmingly Republican. In the one Democratic Ward—the fourth—neither Republican faction entered candidates in the Primary. Of the five Republican Wards, four nominated candidates for Borough Council supported by the regular Republicans and one nominated the councilmanic candidate of the Independents.

It is fitting that the Republican Committees of the First Ward should take cognizance of the fact that in view of the Primary decision, the Democratic nominees in the Republican Wards, except where they secured both party nominations, have withdrawn their names, except in the First, where John F. Smoyer, nominated by two Democratic voters writing his name upon the ballot, remains ostensibly as a Democratic candidate.

So far as we know, Mr. Smoyer has never in his life voted the Democratic ticket. His contests always have been within the ranks of the Republican Party. It was as a Republican that he served the term in Council that is now expiring, and it was as a Republican that he entered the September Primary seeking the support of his Republican constituents for nomination for another term.

The issue of the Primary contest was distinctly an issue within the Republican Party and was so recognized upon every hand. It was decided by the voters themselves, who, in the First Ward, nominated Mr. Winter, as opposed to Mr. Smoyer.

The question that stands out at this time, as a consequence of Mr. Smoyer not having withdrawn himself from nomination supported by only two votes, is whether or not Mr. Smoyer intends to further contest the decision of the voters of the First Ward as given in the September Primary, by leaving the Republican Party and becoming a Democratic candidate in the November Election.

Mr. Smoyer has created a situation, the real significance of which the Republicans of the First Ward are entitled to know. Having used the Primary to seek a definite expression of the Republican voters' views, does he or does he not intend to abide by the majority vote?

We think it is up to the Republican committeemen of the First Ward to put the question bluntly to Mr. Smoyer and to require of him a direct and unequivocal answer. They should do so at once.

WINTER OPPOSES THE SHOOTING OF DOE DEER

District Forester Is Strongly Against Indiscriminate Killing of Deer

NOTED THEIR RETURN

HARRISBURG, Oct. 18 (I.N.S.)—Under the title, "Pennsylvania's Deer Policy," the weekly bulletin of the State Department of Forests and Waters today comes out strongly against indiscriminate shooting of doe deer.

R. B. Winter, district forester of the Bald Eagle State forest, who has watched the return of deer to Pennsylvania's mountains for more than a quarter of a century is the author of the article.

Winter recalls the time when even in the most mountainous section of the State it was possible for a deer hunter to spend a day during the season without seeing as much as a deer track. In those days, he said, even the killing of a doe deer was quite an event, and that neighbors for miles around came to see the carcass and to congratulate the "mighty hunter."

In reply to the charges of damage being done by deer in some sections Winter takes care to bring out two points which he says that those who favor indiscriminate shooting overlook. He points out that in at least twenty counties farmers are allowed to kill deer causing damage and to retain the carcass. The only thing the game commission requires in such cases is that a report of the killing be made to the nearest warden.

In many cases the large number of deer close to farming land is blamed on the practice of "salting." Farmers who want to have plenty of deer close to their farms place salt licks to attract them. Hunters claim that deer travel dozens of miles to salt licks and then stay in the vicinity. If there were less salt licks close to the farms, Winter believes there would be less claims of crop damage.

Advocating that the Game Commission purchase abandoned farms, Winter asserts that such a policy would further reduce complaints. There are thousands of farms in the deer country, cleared by early settlers who were more interested in lumbering than in farming, that now are slowly being claimed by the encroachment of the forest. This land, he says, could be purchased cheaply and would make ideal places for deer. In almost all such cases the land had been abandoned because the soil was not fertile enough to make farming pay.

ARRESTED AT CROYDON, MAN IS GIVEN JAIL TERM

Edward McGee Goes to Philadelphia County Prison For Term

STOLE AUTO IN PHILA.

Edward McGee, 20, Fourth street near Girard avenue, Philadelphia, yesterday pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile and was sentenced by Judge Lewis, in Quarter Sessions Court, Philadelphia, to not less than five years nor more than 10 years in the County Prison.

On the night of October 2nd, McGee stole the automobile of Joel Fisher, 2033 East Clearfield street, Philadelphia. At 1:30 a. m., the next morning he drove the car into a bridge abutment in Croydon and wrecked it.

McGee was arrested after the accident at Croydon by Constable Thomas Crawford. He was charged with intoxication and Crawford communicated with the Philadelphia authorities in an endeavor to trace the ownership of the car. The constable then learned that McGee was wanted for stealing the machine and that the Philadelphia police would send for him.

McGee was returned to Philadelphia and yesterday went on trial. Constable Crawford was on hand and aided in the prosecution of the case.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. C. Krouse, of Maple avenue, Bridgewater, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Loretta D. Sands, to Lewis C. Storms, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram J. Storms, also of Maple avenue, Bridgewater.

Walter Maier Given Jail Term By Justice Walmsley

Walter Maier, who operates a combination drug and oyster saloon at Croydon, was arrested last night at 9 o'clock by Officer H. Lincoln Hughes charged with being intoxicated, disorderly and threatening the lives of five people who were in his place of business, eating.

In the midst of these people eating, Maier turned out the lights, demanding that they "get out of the place as fast as you can or I'll kill you all."

Maier was taken before Justice of the Peace John W. Walmsley and sentenced to three months in the Bucks County Prison at Doylestown.

This is the third time Maier has been arrested on the same charge and at the time of his last arrest, was sentenced to 30 days by Justice Walmsley.

BUILDING CODE URGED FOR MORRISVILLE

Sewers and Shade Tree Commission To Be Discussed

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 18.—With Morrisville continuing its growth and the demand of its citizens for continued improvements, Common Council is facing a condition that will require the most careful administration in order that the growth will not be thwarted. The present councilmen are now planning with the new councilmen, to be elected next month, a systematic program of borough improvements that will keep pace with the growth of the community.

Better streets, better lighting, better water, better schools, better sidewalks, better fire protection and a better community spirit are some of the things recently accomplished.

The street program is the best that has ever been attempted in the borough. The main thoroughfares have been paved with concrete and, while there was State aid, the remainder of the cost was paid by the municipality and property owners. With the success of this work and the fine spirit the property owners entered into the agreement to pay their proportionate share, because they were getting something for their money, councilmen now propose to pave a number of other thoroughfares with a tar-bound macadam and the cost will be born by the property owners. It is proposed to pave Crown street from Palmer street to Trenton avenue this fall and next spring there will be a number of other thoroughfares paved with the same kind of material. This plan of having the streets paved is meeting with the hearty approval of the property owners and Common Council is being urged to extend this work in every section of the town.

The street committee recently purchased additional equipment for street repair work and practically all of the side streets and avenues were scraped, rolled and placed in good condition this summer.

Councilmen Charles C. Young and D. Smith Mershon, members of the street committee, have been extremely active in this work.

Morrisville claims to be the best lighted borough in Bucks County. The main streets, Bridge street and Pennsylvania avenue, for their full length, are lighted with arc lights, and they are placed at close intervals. The light committee is having the smaller lights placed upon arms extending out into the street. All new lights placed are of 100 candle-power. The new lighting system was inaugurated by Neal Nolan, now tax collector, when he was in Council, and his successor, Harry M. Lair, is continuing the work.

Some years ago Morrisville had many wells because the residents refused to drink the water furnished by the borough, but today there is scarcely a well and the borough is furnishing filtered water. The borough has a modern filtration plant, and it was only recently that the water system was made modern and efficient by electrifying the plant.

Morrisville has good sidewalks, but the street committee is anxious that good walks be laid on every street in the borough, and this program is being carried out.

Better fire protection was brought about by the purchase of new apparatus and today Morrisville has four sets of modern fire apparatus, all motorized.

The school problem has been a serious one for Morrisville, but the Board of School Directors has coped with the situation and the district is now in fine condition, with two modern new buildings added to the system.

George Burgner, as head of the finance committee, had all the property and equipment appraised. Burgner, with the borough auditors, Watson J. Simons and Mervin Dixon, installed an entire new system of book-

ARRESTED YOUTH MAY IDENTIFY STRANGLER

Said To Have Accompanied Girl's Assailant at Various Times

WILL BE QUESTIONED

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 18.—Police believe that Robert Pitman, 17 years old, of Yardley, who is under arrest at Morrisville, N. J., can throw light upon the case of Arthur Leonard, gunman, who was slain by Trooper Codd, of the Netcong State Police last week. Leonard is believed to be "The Philadelphia Strangler" who attacked Miss Helen Merritt, of Yardley. Pitman is said to have been with Leonard on trips through Pennsylvania. Following Leonard's death Pitman was arrested at Morrisville.

The body of Leonard was yesterday forwarded to the home of relatives in Bainbridge, Pa. Captain John J. Lamb, commander of the Morrisville State Police, went before the Morris County Grand Jury yesterday to present the facts of the shooting of Leonard. Captain Lamb mailed photographs of Leonard to Miss Merritt in an effort to have the gunman identified as her assailant. Captain Lamb had received complaints that Leonard, in his wanderings, emptied his revolver into the air above groups of school children.

The young man killed by the trooper was known as Arthur Leonard, alias Ellie Leonard, Eddie Waugh and William Anderson. He roomed at the home of a Mr. Pitman at Yardley and while there became acquainted with Pitman's son, Leonard and the boy, it is said, traveled through a good portion of Pennsylvania and later returned to Yardley. It is said that after he had attacked two young girls at Yardley he disappeared. Pitman's gloves were stolen the night Leonard disappeared and these gloves were found at the spot where Miss Merritt was attacked.

Pennsylvania police learned that Leonard had been staying at the Pitman home and both Pennsylvania and New Jersey troopers went there to investigate. Trooper Codd, of Netcong, was asked to try to locate Leonard and he traced him to a factory near Lake Hopatcong. Leonard fled from the factory when the trooper entered. Chief of Police Plumstead, of Netcong, finally nabbed him, but he broke away and ran into a nearby woods. Both officers pulled their guns and Codd is said to have shot Leonard in the back. He was taken to the Morris General Hospital, where he died the following night.

State Police claim that Leonard was wanted for a variety of crimes and that he also attacked girls in Luzerne County, Pa. They say that he was a dangerous gunman and highwayman. It is said that he escaped three times after being caught in different parts of the country. Leonard's revolver was found in a boarding house near Netcong.

ASKS DAMAGES FROM PHYSICIAN IN SUM OF $50,000

Perkasie Woman Claims She Has Been Permanently Injured

SUIT NOW BEING HEARD

Mistrial Was Declared at The June Term Of Court

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Anna H. Frederick, of Perkasie, is asking $50,000 damages from Dr. Otto H. Strouse, of Perkasie, in a civil court trial that started yesterday in Court No. 1 with Judge William C. Ryan presiding.

The plaintiff and her husband, Horace B. Frederick, allege that Mrs. Frederick has been permanently injured and will never recover her health as a result of a "third degree burn," alleged by Mrs. Frederick to have been the result of negligent X-ray treatment administered by Dr. Strouse in September, 1923.

The case was called for trial at the June term of civil court before Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg. After several witnesses were called a mistrial was declared and a juror was withdrawn and the case continued. The argument came after an argument between counsel on both sides involving technicalities. The defense attorneys, Howard I. James, of Bristol, and Mark Thatcher, of Perkasie, argued at the first trial that the time of the offenses averred in the statement of claim was varied by two weeks beyond the time Mrs. Frederick testified to while on the stand.

In the trial of the case this time the same attorneys are representing the defendant, Harry Grim, of Perkasie, is representing Mrs. Frederick. A number of expert medical witnesses will be called to testify for both sides. Mrs. Frederick is asking damages for injuries she described on the stand yesterday as "X-ray burns" suffered in 1923 when Dr. Strouse treated her for a tumor.

The statement of claim set forth that shortly before September 2, 1923, Mrs. Frederick became ill, and that Dr. Strouse gave her X-ray treatments on eight different days enumerated in the statement of claim. The plaintiff also alleges that as a result of the treatment, the defendant "negligently burned" her body, flesh and skin, that the skin came off over a space of about six inches by five inches.

Mrs. Frederick is asking $50,000 for herself and her husband is asking $10,000 damages.

The statement of claim also sets forth that Mrs. Frederick could have been easily and permanently cured by a surgical operation at the time she first called upon the defendant, but that the defendant persuaded Mrs. Frederick not to go to a hospital.

On the witness stand yesterday, Mrs. Frederick, aged 60, testified that she could not follow her former occupation as a seamstress when she was able to earn $10 a week.

Another paragraph of the statement of claim is as follows: "That because of the great amount of pain and suffering caused by the injuries inflicted by the defendant by reason of which Mrs. Frederick's future is blighted and her only hope is to wait death, and the great pain and suffering that she has undergone and will continue to undergo during the rest of her life, she has suffered damages to the sum of $50,000."

The plaintiff testimony presented tended to show that Dr. Strouse did not properly prepare Mrs. Frederick for the X-ray treatment and that the doctor did not place a "filter" in the X-ray machine during the last treatment. Mrs. Frederick testified that Dr. Strouse told her there were two ways to get rid of her trouble, one was the surgeon's knife and the other, the X-ray, and that the doctor advised her that it was a member of his own family, he would advise her to take the X-ray treatment.

Called for cross-examination after Mrs. Frederick had been on the stand, Dr. Strouse, in answer to Attorney Grim's question, stated that he used a "Wappler." King model X-ray machine, purchased in 1921. He said that he used for the treatment of Mrs. Frederick, an eight-inch spark gap, ten inches from the body, for a period of five minutes.

Dr. Joseph R. Gariss, of 34 West State street, Trenton, X-ray specialist at the Mercer Hospital and New Jersey State Hospital, was called as an expert witness by the plaintiff counsel.

"A physician of ordinary skill and learning," testified Dr. Gariss, "would not treat a patient as did Dr. Strouse in the case of Mrs. Frederick, without the use of a filter in his machine. Such treatment would be likely to produce a burn."

Dr. N. B. Williams, of Perkasie, who has practiced for thirty-five years, was next called by the plaintiff counsel. He said that on March 25, 1924, he visited Mrs. Frederick professionally, after Dr. Strouse had treated the woman with the X-ray machine. He said that he found a large ulcer on the abdomen

250 YEARS OF PROGRESS

Right justly can Bristol's sister borough, Burlington, on the opposite banks of the swift-flowing Delaware, take pride in its past history! And not only is the New Jersey town, so close to our shores, justified in taking pride in the past, but in the present plans for the future.

The celebration last week in the south Jersey town marked not alone the 250 anniversary of the founding of the town, but gave all a fine glance back over the years that have spelled progress in the city's history.

Started years ago by those who were industrious as well as prosperous, and having as its founders and residents those who had the welfare of America at heart, Burlington has grown not only numerically as far as citizens are concerned, but industrially as well.

Its history in the days of conflict between the whites and the Indian braves, was one of peace, for above all the Quaker folk who made this spot their home valued their friendship with all.

The founders of the colony were lauded last week by those high in affairs of state; praised by men who rank high in the affairs of government.

Burlington not only gave much in its early years, but down through the decades.

The celebration of the days last week was colorful and spectacular. From the capital city, and from many states in the union were people drawn thither; and as Burlington gave much of profit in its days as a colony, and has contributed in literature, science and industry, during the years intervening, it will still continue its forward march of progress, giving as a city to the state and nation of which it is a part, the best and highest it has to offer.

CHINA MAY SHOW THE WAY

Steps being taken in Shanghai to organize the Protestant churches in Cuba into an undenominational body under native direction constitute an inevitable outcome of the movement in that country for political, social and economic emancipation.

While the change is essentially a manifestation of the anti-foreign sentiment which pervades all elements in China, its promoters disclaim any hostility to Protestant missionaries and the churches back of them. It may be presumed that Chinese who separate themselves from their countrymen by becoming Christians act under sincere conviction, and aim to practice the Christian virtues of charity, brotherhood and co-operation in good works. But evidently they believe the cause will prosper better if developed as a native institution rather than continued as an alien project.

Here, where there is so much denominational division and where efforts to unite the Protestant churches have met with great opposition, many are skeptical that the hundreds of missions established in China by a score or more different denominations can be merged into one great undenominational Protestant church. They overlook the fact that denominationalism was imposed upon the Chinese, to whom it is most mystifying, whereas in this country and Europe it is the product of difference in opinion, belief and Biblical interpretation. Had all the missions in China been created by one Protestant church there would be only one Protestant church in China.

The winter work of the Junior League of the Methodist Church commenced last evening, under the leadership of Miss Adeline E. Reetz, superintendent. The meetings will be held between the hours of seven and eight, at the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vansant and Mrs. Ella Paul, of Langhorne; and Mrs. Cyrus E. Smith, of Hulmeville, motored to Spring City, Pa., on Saturday and visited Rev. and Mrs. Horace Hoffman. Rev. Hoffman was at one time pastor of the Methodist Church here.

Tonight the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will conduct a business meeting at the home of Mrs. J. C. Everitt.

Town Briefs

—Robert McCurry, of 340 Jackson street, fell last week and sustained a severely cut leg.

"THE FIRST AUTO," with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

In 1896 Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, knowing his father's hatred of machines, is secretly inventing gasoline engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. He quarrels with Steve Bentley, his rival in love, and an empty spring up between the two. Several years later Hank, still faithful to the horse, is roused to fury when he overhears his son advising the Mayor to buy a car. In his anger he horsewhips Bob, who is saved a cruel beating only through the intervention of Rose. In turn Bob thrashes Steve in a fist fight, because the latter has taunted him about the affair.

CHAPTER XII

At the sound of Hank's voice and the tone in which he pronounced his mandate of "You come here!" Bob turned, startled. He gazed on the wrathful figure of vengeance outlined in the doorway and his heart beat double-quick time. Rose and her father stared uncomprehendingly at the irate parent, arrested by the severity of his look and words. The tableau held for some seconds. Then Bob walked over to his father. With a sweep of his arm the older man motioned the boy into the office.

Once inside the door Hank stopped and faced his son. "I never beat a horse in my life," he said, slowly, as though measuring each word. "I always taught them by kindness."

Bob looked up at his father in surprise. The meaning of the words was certainly not clear, nor did they convey anything to the young man's mind. He stood and waited for some explanation of his father's strange behavior.

With a violent snap he brought the lash down across Bob's shoulder.

"I tried to teach you by the same methods," Hank continued, clearing his throat. "But I made one great mistake." He was trembling, now, and his eyes snapped fire. He paused.

"You ain't as intelligent as a horse," he finally snarled, "or you wouldn't be always studying and talking about them new fangled devil-wagons."

As Bob's bewilderment grew the old man became more excited. He was working himself up into a fury, whipped on by the thoughts that had been surging through his mind. His anger, incited by the treatment he had received at the race track and furthered by Mayor Robbins' statement concerning automobiles, had reached its peak when he heard his own son openly urge the replacement of the horse by the machine. The long accumulation of pent-up hatred was now manifesting itself.

Setting the black snake whip that he had thrown across his desk, he raised it, trembling in his wrath. "A horse is loyal to the hand that feeds it," he yelled, "but you would betray even your father, you treacherous sneak!"

With a violent snap he brought the lash down across Bob's shoulders. The boy stiffened to defend himself; thrust out his arm to catch his father's upraised arm. Then suddenly he turned. He was raising his hand against his own father. The thought flashed through his mind. As he wavered the whip descended again, cutting his shoulder viciously. He crouched, ready to spring for the door.

As the horseman raised his arm again Rose and her father, hearing the commotion, rushed toward the office. A small boy, rolling a hoop, paused, fascinated by the spectacle. Rose threw open the door and screamed at the sight she saw there. Without stopping to consider her own safety she hurried her body before the crouching figure of the boy.

"For God's sake, stop!" she cried, raising her hand to fend off the expected blow.

For a second Hank stood, his body rigid, his face livid with rage. Then slowly his arm descended: the whip-hand fell. He took a step backwards. Then he laughed, a short, ugly laugh. "Now that I'm through with him," he turned to the Mayor, who stood helplessly in the doorway, "you can give him a job driving the auto he talked you into buying."

He flung the whip aside and stalked out of the rear door into the stables. He turned his head once to look again at the group, and then continued slowly down past the stalls. Rose and Bob stared silently at each other. She wanted to take the boy in her arms. She wanted to kiss and comfort him. But now that the crisis had passed she could do nothing. And Bob, so hurt, so humiliated, was unable to speak. The tears were perilously close to his eyes; his chin quivered. But it was not the sting of the whip on his flesh that unmanned him. The cuts in his flesh were as nothing compared to the wounds in his heart. His soul cried out in an agony of torment.

The Mayor backed out the doorway, stunned. And the archer who had been enjoying the drama from without, seized his hoop and sped down the street. Slowly Bob and Rose followed her father, and the three paused on the doorstep. Then Mayor Robbins reached out and patted the boy's shoulder.

"If you want a job, Bob," he said kindly, "I think I can fix it."

The tension was broken. Bob looked up at the older man gratefully.

"Not here in town, Mr. Robbins," he shook his head. "I—I think I'd better go away."

Rose looked at Bob, perilously close to tears herself, but Mayor Robbins nodded his head, thoughtfully.

"Well, perhaps—but if you need any help," and he looked from his daughter to the boy.

"Thank you—thank you both," Bob looked at Rose, and smiled. "I'll be all right."

Mayor Robbins took his daughter's arm, and the two started up the street towards home. Bob watched them go, and then glanced back into the barn. Finally he squared his shoulders, took a deep breath as though he were about to plunge into unknown waters, and walked slowly down Main Street. As he neared the drug store he noticed a boy with a hoop talking and gesticulating excitedly.

"An' you should a seen it!" the small boy was rattling on before a group of loungers. "The old man raises th' whip an' bing! He cracks Bob an awful whack! A' nen Rose, she jumps in, a' nen she yells: 'For God's sake, stop!' A' nen the old man, he just stands still like this!" The small boy illustrated his dramatic story by raising his hoop stick and imitating Hank. His tale was nothing if not vividly graphic, for, with the gusto of all small boys who can catch the ear of an audience he was thoroughly enjoying his own recital.

Steve Bentley looked at the boy and laughed. He, too, was enjoying the news, but from another angle. Dang glad, he was, Bob got a lickin'. Served him right! Always actin' so high-falutin! He was smart, was he? Know-it-all! May be he'd learn a lesson. Wouldn't be so dang ready after this to air his ideas. He looked up from his thoughts and saw Bob sauntering along in the general direction of the drug store. He watched his rival-in-love with a smile of satisfaction. As Bob came opposite the group Steve grinned.

"Hear your old man would of skinned you if Rose hadn't stepped in," he taunted.

The loungers snickered at Steve's sally, but Steve laughed out loud. Bob turned and looked steadily at his tormentor. Then, without a word he deliberately slapped the young man full across the mouth with the back of his hand. Steve staggered. The loungers jumped to their feet, eager to see a fight.

Steve straightened up and rushed towards the offending party. Bob assumed the defensive, braced himself to meet the onslaught, and waited. Steve lurched forward, his fists swinging madly, and attacked blindly. Before he had even time to aim a blow his chin came into contact with a hard substance. With a jerk he crumpled up, crashing into the loungers who were crowding closely, and fell to the ground with a thud. Bob had shot out his fist and planted a neat up-percut on his opponent's lower jaw.

The victor stood looking down on the vanquished awaiting further movement on the latter's part. But Steve was out. Bob dusted off his hands, turned heel, and walked slowly up the street, the center of all admiring and envious glances from those who had witnessed the fight. There were no few among the group who would have liked to have done the same thing, for Steve, with his over-bearing manner and his smart-aleck airs, was not popular. But there were few who would have dared to brave the wrath of the village bully.

"THE DAWN" IDLE AGAIN TODAY; FLIGHT POSTPONED

Disagreement Over Question Of Lifting Power Of The Plane

MAY HOP TOMORROW

"I'm Going, Regardless Of What Happens," Says Mrs. Grayson

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Oct. 18 (I.N.S.)—Adverse winds along the shore, coupled with a disagreement over the question of the lifting power of the trans-Atlantic plane, "The Dawn," caused Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson today again to postpone the take-off for Copenhagen, Denmark.

"The Dawn" may hop at low tide, between eleven and twelve o'clock tomorrow forenoon, she said.

In the take-off yesterday "The Dawn" was down by the nose because of an unequalled load and had to return. Mrs. Grayson today was insisting on another load test with Navigator Brice Boldsborough objecting on the ground of unnecessary delay.

Pilot Wilmer L. Stultz, who will guide the ship, was non-committal, only insisting apparently that he have a south, southeast or southwest wind for the take-off.

The disagreement between Mrs. Grayson and her navigator broke out in a local hotel while they were studying weather reports from steamships at sea.

"I'm going to make this trip regardless of what happens," said Mrs. Grayson, it was learned. "I've worked more than a month on this flight and I'm going through with it in every detail."

The crew of the Sikorsky airplane company worked all night in equalizing the load. All was ready for a take-off today.

Weather reports today, although showing a strong northeast wind on the coast, noted clear weather over the Atlantic with visibility the best in some days.

Navigator Boldsborough, it was learned, was for an immediate hop with the low tide around eleven o'clock o'clock this morning. Mrs. Grayson raised the question of another load test. She wanted to lighten the load of "The Dawn" further and make another test flight.

"That means that all we have done here will have to be done all over," Boldsborough exclaimed, it was learned.

"Kincade (T. Harold Kincade, motor expert) wouldn't have given the motors his O. K. if they weren't all right."

Then Mrs. Grayson gave her ultimatum—that she was going to Copenhagen but that she would not start until every detail was checked up. That she would not be hurried by two brave but impatient men.

and back and that in his opinion he thought it to be an X-ray burn and that he treated her for that. The witness said that Mrs. Frederick is unable to do what he would call "a good day's work," and that her injury "may be permanent." He said that his medical bill for treating Mrs. Frederick to date is $932.

Under cross-examination, Dr. Williams said he did not have Mrs. Frederick's blood examined at any time but that in his opinion, the ulcer did not come from her blood condition. He also said that he never consulted a surgeon about Mrs. Frederick's condition, for in his opinion a surgical operation at this time would bring the cut almost to the abdomen.

Dr. Williams was then asked by defense counsel to enumerate the treatment that he is administering to Mrs. Frederick at the present time. The doctor recited a number of treatments and medicines being used, one of which was "Scarlet Red."

The defense then called the expert witness of the plaintiff in cross-examination, Dr. Joseph R. Gariss, and asked him what would be the result of the application of "Scarlet Red" upon an injury such as Mrs. Frederick has. Dr. Gariss said that in his opinion it would aggravate irritation rather than heal.

At this point Court adjourned until this morning.

Building Code Urged For Morrisville

Keeping for the borough secretary and borough treasurer.

A community house was given to Morrisville several years ago by the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania. The American Legion and its auxiliary, the Chamber of Commerce, Common Council, the Red Cross, Home and School League, Girl Scouts, Hospital Auxiliary, political clubs, fire companies, boys' organizations, public schools and various athletic organizations make their headquarters in this building.

Common Council will take up several important matters during the coming year. Among these are a building code, a shade tree commission and sewers for Morrisville.

R. R. R. Adopts Electric Refrigeration On Dinners

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 18.—Electric refrigeration is now being used by the Pennsylvania Railroad in its dining car service, an elaborate Frigidaire installation being provided in the new commissary building just completed by the railroad at 328 Roosevelt road, in this city.

A battery of four huge built-in refrigerators, with a capacity of thousands of pounds of meats, fruits and vegetables, is an important part of the new commissary. These refrigerators are cooled with Frigidaire equipment, making one of the largest heavy-duty electric refrigeration installations in the country.

The commissary will supply food for all Pennsylvania dining cars clearing out of the Chicago yards.

Use of electric refrigeration in dining kitchens is already being made by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, which has a Frigidaire installation operating efficiently despite the extreme heat caused by nearby stoves in the limited space of the dining car kitchen.
